HIGHLIGHTS

After 13 days, the House remains stalled while they try to find a Majority. An attempt earlier in the week to nominate Rep. Talerico as Speaker failed 20/20.

Bills will only be read across the House Floor once the members organize.

A House majority must be formed in order to elect a permanent Speaker of the House, make committee assignments and conduct legislative business.

In the meantime, they are convening bi-partisan briefing sessions on key issues.

The Senate is starting to move with committee assignments, confirmation hearings, info sessions and a bill hearing or two.

President Giessel introduced SB 36 extending the Board of Nursing through June 30, 2025 and SB 37 relating to a statewide immunization program removing the 3-year phase-in period.

During a January 22nd confirmation hearing for the department of administration's commissioner designee, John Quick, questions arose over his purported ownership of a Washington business. One of the registered owners wrote a letter to the Finance committee stating that he never had any ownership in the business.

The governor accepted Mr. Quick's resignation on the 24th and named Paula Vrana as Acting Commissioner.

Alaskans from Homer to Anchorage to Fairbanks to Juneau participated in the 3rd Women's March joining supporters from across the nation. Approximately 650 people marched in Juneau with speakers focusing on missing and murdered indigenous women.

GOVERNOR'S CORNER

The governor's office will post press releases and other items of interest here:

Governor Dunleavy delivered his first State of the State Address Tuesday. He declared war on criminals and said he plans to keep spending in line with revenue, protect the PFD, and restore public trust in government.

The biggest Address news were three proposed constitutional amendments to establish a spending limit and saving plan, protect the dividend and require a vote of the people for new taxes.

The Governor continues to make appointments to various boards and commissions. Look here for the list to date: Boards and Commissions

Two nominations to the Marijuana Control board may be less industry friendly. Vivian Stiver has a history of speaking against legalization and was involved in a 2017 effort to ban marijuana operations in Fairbanks. Lt. Christopher Jaime has expressed interest in revisiting the onsite use issue.

BUDGET ISSUES

Former Commissioner designees Quick and Tangeman sat in front of Senate Finance on Tuesday. Responding to questions, Tangeman explained the $1.6 billion deficit number comes from having $3.2 billion in revenues forecasted (projecting oil prices to be about $64 per barrel) while former Governor Walker’s proposed budget was $4.8 billion.

Tangeman said oil revenue is projected at about $2.2 billion, and revenue from the Earnings Reserve is projected (using the POMV approved last session) at about $2.9 billion.

About $1.9 billion will go to a full PFD package, based on Dunleavy’s proposal. Adding the $2.2 billion of oil revenue to the $1 billion left from the percent of market value appropriation gets to the $3.2 billion in revenue.

Donna Arduin, the new OMB Super director who has worked for several Governors around the country and is known as a budget hawk, debuted Thursday in Senate Finance. She painted a very big complicated picture, gave broad answers to tough questions and promised budget details by February 13th.

Those details will amend the Governor’s original budget bills—SB 19 the capital budget; SB 20 the operating budget; and, SB 21 the mental health budget

The Governor’s goal is to erase the $1.6 billion gap and fully fund the PFD. He also has a three-year plan to pay Alaskans funds that should have been distributed as part of the 2016-2018 PFDs.

There are legislative skeptics who warn of severe cuts and say it doesn’t make sense. For example, getting rid of eleven of the state operating agencies would save only $580 million. Even if you eliminate all those departments and lay off all state employees there would still be a deficit.

Expect strong reactions when the new budget finally shows up.

BILLS

The Governor introduced 4 bills on Wednesday as part of his tough on crime pledge. The bills address parole and prison sentences, pretrial processes, and sex crimes.

SB 32 lengthens sentencing penalties for drug offenses including trafficking; creates a felony for removal of an electronic monitoring device; increases the maximum length of probation for sex offenses from 15 to 25 years; defines “terroristic threatening” to allow law enforcement to respond sooner to a threatened school shooting

SB 33 deletes the pretrial assessment tool currently in place for judges to use in making release decisions; without the tool judges will have more discretion in determining whether a person is released and uses an electronic monitoring device or has a third-party custodian, or a pretrial department of corrections officer will monitor the person; encourages video-conferencing for pretrial hearings; and removes good time credit for time spent on pre-trial electronic monitoring SB 34 eliminates caps on the amount of time that can be imposed upon probation violators; expands list of crimes that may qualify as probation violations; restricts earned-compliance (good time) credit to a 3 day to 1day ratio; takes away good time earned to date if probationers are found in violation of any of their conditions SB 35 classifies unwanted contact with semen as sexual contact and makes it punishable as a sex offense; requires persons convicted of producing or viewing child pornography to register as a sex offender; requires people registered as sex offenders in another state to register with the Alaska registry when they move into the state; makes abuse of a minor a felony in all circumstances; expands the list of tools used to solicit sexual favors - entice a minor from only computers to all communication devices.
